

View of Sherman Peak, the highest point on the Lolo Trail, from the west. Clark recorded on September 18, 1805: "... from the top of a high part of the maintain at 20 miles I had a view of an emence Plain and leavel Countrney to the S.W. & West." Note the burned over timber in this area. Photograph by Ray H. Mattison, July 1958. Negative in Region Two Office Library, Omaha, Nebraska

This photograph shows the high, rugged landscape of the Bitterroot Mountains of Idaho along the route of the Lolo Trail. The trail passed along the high backbone of the mountain divide between the North Fork of the Clearwater River on the north and the Lochsa River on the south. The crest of the ridge seen in the left center of the picture, and about two miles away, marks the location of the trail in the vicinity of Indian Post Office. This view looks north. Photograph by Ray H. Mattison, July 1958, National Park Service.

Lolo Trail, Idaho

View of one of the two rock cairns known as the Indian Post Office.

N.P.S. Photo, 1958

Book Examination near the site of Fort Rogers, near which Lewis and Clark camped on the northern edge near the Indian Trail. Indian Creek may be seen on the right. South view.
Photographed by Roy A. MacMillan, July, 1923. Registered in Copyright of the Library, Ottawa, Dominion.